presents

Joshua M. Langberg, PhD
Assistant Professor of Psychology
Virginia Commonwealth University

author of

Homework, Organization, and Planning Skills (HOPS) Interventions

Dr. Langberg will provide a presentation for parents of students attending public or private schools in Fairfield on how to support middle and high school students with home-based assignments and study skills.

Dr. Langberg's presentation will dovetail with a professional development workshop he will be providing to teachers and counselors on the following day.

The HOPS method is highly effective at improving organization skills, decreasing homework problems, raising grade point averages, and creating long-term successes. The program has been shown to help students with ADHD and problems with executive functioning and can be applied to an individual, small group, or classroom setting. It assists students in translating skills learned into positive outcomes in the classroom and it builds in parental involvement to facilitate positive conversations about homework.
